

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE:

The Kales Report and the Zombie Phenomenon

Temple, TX USA

July 16, 2011

Just like in Joseph Kales' journal, The Kales Report, a new disturbing concern for America, as from the United States Government's Center for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), is surviving the attack of the Zombies. According to Assistant Surgeon General Ali Khan, preparing for the coming Zombie Apocalypse will help us be prepared for other emergencies as well. Maybe the flesh eating, brain sucking Zombies aren't the real threat as he may be suggesting, but just a practice emergency. Then again it's possible that the Zombies we must prepare for are ourselves after most of us get infected with some mysterious new virus or bacteria. If we're walking around looking at one another with a knife and fork in our hand it really doesn't matter that we're not officially a member of the undead does it?

Eventually we find out that the CDC backs off and says the fear of a Zombie Apocalypse as presented in their blog on their Web Site ( http://emergency.cdc.gov/socialmedia/zombies\_blog.asp ) is 'tongue-in-cheek'.

They call on us to have a gallon of water a day per person, food, first aid supplies and a few tools. If we can survive without dying of starvation, thirst or disease I guess we all know how to fight off a horde of bloodthirsty zombies with a utility knife, a hammer and a screwdriver.

Maybe the CDC should recommend we all read The Kales Report: Ode to the Undead, or then again maybe we should all just build gun towers around our houses or sit in our windows with binoculars and automatic rifles.
